East Pacts ArePushed By Brandt

Sees Both Allies, Russia Concerned

BONN, March 27 (AP):-Chancellor Willy Brandt said tonight that his government's Western allies as well as the Soviet Union were worried that Bonn's treaties with Moscow and Warsaw would not be ratified by the West German parliament

Mr. Brandt sald he felt they need not have cause for concern despite the razor-thin parliamentary majority of his coalition of Social Democrats and Free Demo-

Attacking his opposition to parliament. Mr. Brandt said the Christian Democrats had predicted that the nonaggression pacts with the Soviet Union and Poland would cause Bonn to lose the support of its Western allies. "Just the opposite is true," the chancellor said in a West German television interview. "It has been confirmed, as we have said, that there is considerable concern among our Western partners and allies-concern about the possibuilty that the treaties may fail, something they will not do."

Asked about the possibility that Soviet pressure for passage might hurt rother than help the treaties' chances, the chancellor said:

"That the Soviet Union represents its views and does so in its own manner, which in no way is similar to our own, should not cause any mature person to wonder. One does not make treaties with Communist-ruled states because one suddenly sees things the same as the gentlemen there do, but rather because the at-tempt has to be made to improve relations, irrespective of continuing differences of opinion and ad-

The chancellor said he expected a roll-call vote on the treatles in the Bundestag. This is necessary, Mr. Brandt said, "because the results presumably will be how great the gap is between those who are in favor and those who oppose."

Mr. Brandt's ruling coalition has been left with 250 Bundestag deputies after one Social Democrat defected to the opposition, which now has 246 votes. Several other coalition deputies are known to be wavering.

While holding open the pos-sibility of new elections if the treatles should fail to win pasage, Mr. Brandt said he expectto bring his government through to the regular end of the —legislative period in 1973.

Mansfield Stresses Passage

WASHINGTON, March 27 (AP).—Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said today the passibility that West Germany's parliament will vote against ratifying the treaties negotiated between West Germany and Poand and the Soviet Union "is a infiling thought."

Sen. Mansfield told the Senate that the treaties "are of trancendant importance to the future Western Europe, and indirectly to this country."

Russia Sends Spaceship to Study Venus

By Theodore Shabad MOSCOW, March 27 (NYT) .-The Soviet Union announced today the launching of its eighth unmanned spacecraft for the exploration of Venus.

The 2,600-pound craft, named Venus-8, is scheduled to make a smooth descent through the hot and dense Venusian atmosphere in July after a journey of 194 mil-If the instruments hold out against the high pressures and temperatures, the spacecraft may repeat the feat of its predecessor. Venus-7, which radiced data from the Venusian surface in December, 1970, for 20 minutes before signals ceased.

It reported a surface temperature of 475 degrees centigrade (about 900 degrees Fahrenheit) and a surface pressure of 90 atmospheres, or 90 times the atmospheric pressure of the earth at sea level.

There was no indication whether the latest Venus experiment was a single-craft mission, like Venus-7, or would be part of a two-spacecraft effort, as in the case of Venus-5 and Venus-6, launched a few days apart in 1969.

Little U.S. Activity The United States has been leaving the unmanned exploration of Venus to the Soviet Union since two early Mariner fly-by missions. Mariner-2 approached within 21,500 miles of Venus in 1962, and Mariner-5 flew 2,400 miles past the planet in 1967. The next American Venusian probe is scheduled for next year, when a Mariner-class spacecraft is to fly by Venus and then head on to explore the planet Mercury for the first time. A study of the National Academy of Sciences setting U.S. priorities for space research in the 1970s has recommended a more concentrated American effort in exploration of Venus.

18,646 in U.S. Got Love Tap From Tax Law

WASHINGTON, March 27 (UPI).-There were 18,646 Americans who earned at least $100,000 during 1970 but through loopholes paid taxes at a rate below 7 percent which is paid by people earning $6.500 a year, Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D., Wis, said today.

Rep. Reuss said his figures were based on Treasury Department data covering the 'minimum tax' provision of the 1969 tax reform law. The minimum tax provision was designed to make sure that those with high incomes paid a least some federal income

"As it stands now," Rep. Reuss said, "the minimum tax administers just a small love tap' to wealthy tax avoiders. They can continue to use tax loopholes if they will pay a small admission fee for the

Ulster Life Disrupted By Protestant Walkout

By Bernard Weinraub

BELFAST, March 27 (NYT).-Demonstrations, work stoppages and other industrial disruptions gripped Northern Ireland today as Protestants began a two-day general strike to protest Britain's take-over of the province.

The protests had a powerful impact, bringing life in Ulster to a virtual crawl. Airline, train Electricity supplies were sharply reduced, leaving homes and hotels in darkness for hours. Telephone service was sporadic. Postal deliveries were canceled. Some banks closed down for 48 hours. Although tension and work disruptions were widespread in the six counties, Northern Ireland remained relatively free of violence. There were acts of violence, but they appeared to be uncoordinated. At least five small bombs exploded in the province, without causing serious injuries. Gangs of long-haired Protestant youths, wearing boots and dungarees, hurled stones at the Unity Flats, a bleak Catholic housing project in Belfast, but they were dispersed. In Lurgan, British troops fired rubber bullets to break up crowd of Protestant youths stoning a bus. That was a rare confrontation of Protestants and soldiers during 31 months of violence that has mostly pitted Catholics against British troops, a period in which 287 have died.

[The Associated Press reported that late tonight another bombing wrecked a self-service laundry and dry-cleaning plant in the Donegal Pass, a street in north

IAP said the day's main confrontation came in Portadown, an industrial town 20 miles southwest of Belfast, when police moved in during the afternoon to keep a crowd of about 3,000 Protestants away from a Catholic area.

[An exchange of fire erupted. Protestants then barricaded all blindfolded 10 Britons who lived roads into the town. Late tonight AP reported that police said the town was quiet. Both army and police units were keeping away to avoid further trouble.]

olic violence, the outlawed Irish Republican Army, appeared today to be in disarray, with conflicting views on tactics to be employed under Britain's take-over of the North.

At first, a man claiming to speak for the IRA Provisional wing—the more militant of the a my's two groups-said that the field command in Londongerry, Ulster's second-largest city, would observe a month's truce. But later the Londonderry command of the IRA Provisionals said that the man was not an authorized spokesman. It denied that a truce had been planned and said further comments about IRA tactics would come from Provisional IRA headquarters in Dublin, in the Irish Republic,

There was some indication that Londonderry and Belfast IRA leaders had been sharply reprimanded by the underground army's chief of staff in Dublin, Sean MacStiofain, who insists that the terrorism campaign will continue. The Provisionals in Northern ireland have argued that the Catholic community is overwhelmingly in favor of a major reduction of IRA activity because of the British take-over. Minister Brian Faulkner have which was largely welcomed by Catholics in Ulster.

For a half-century, the Catholic minority in Northern Ireland has viewed the semi-autonomous provincial parliament and government at Stormont Castle, in a suburb of Benast, as the vehicle of Protestant superiority. The government take-over by Britain and the resignation of Prime

Of the Eastern Roman Empire sallied out of Constantinople—"O city, city, pride of the Christians and ruin of the Barbarians!"—to dominate the Mediterranean. Yet a mood that is positively Byzantine dominates the diplomacy of that middle sea today. Politics and religion, power and intrigue, small issues that transcend the greater needs, money that competes with or cooperates with ships of war, personal ambitions and national rivalries-all of these are parts of the complex and dangerous game that is being played on the waters and shores of the Mediterranean, the game of the New Byzantium.

The basic struggle, presumably, is that between the United States and its allies and the Soviet Union and its allies. The United States returned to the Mediterranean in World War II. It had never been dominant there, but down to the American Civil War had maintained a squadron there, and bases of sorts chiefly at Port Mahon in Minorca. Russia has always had hopes of breaking out into the middle sea by gaining control of Constantinople. At times, before the Crimean War, it did deploy considerable naval strength beyond the Hellespont and once took the Catholic Knights of Malta under its Orthodox wing. But its real emergence from the Black Sea is much more recent.

Dom Mintoff has just signed an advantageous treaty with Britain for the use of Maita as a base. His sole card in the game was the possibility that the Soviet ships might move in on the departure of the NATO craft—plus a relationship with Libya that might be called the joker in the deck.

Greece has been wrangling with Archbishop Makarios about Cyprus. Part of the problem is the status of the Turkish minor-

> The United States has been negotiating with Greece about housekeeping rights for the Sixth Fleet in Piraeus—a deal very similar to that which had been negotiated with Spain about Port Mahon in the days of sailing ships. The business has been vastly complicated by Greek politics; a recent trial in Athens seems to hint at the possibility that the Sixth Fleet might be greeted with rebel dynamite, and meet the fate of the Maine in Havana Harbor, nearly 75 years

> Similarly, visiting rights for American ships in Turkey have been disrupted by rioting ashore. The Turkish government promises that this threat has ceased, but the recent kidnapping of British technicians in Turkey casts some doubt on the value of this promise.

> Thus the old NATO lineup of ports is riddled with uncertainty-and the ports which the Soviet Union might use within the territories of its Arab allies are no less foggedin by political complexities. The New Byzantium is quite as replete with peril and discord as the old in its decadence. But it is still within the power of the United States and the Soviet Union to avoid being mired in endless disputes by coming to an agreement at the level of Washington and Moscow, rather than being at the mercy of Valletta, Piraeus and Tripoli. The free passage of tankers and freighters is after all more useful to mankind (including the superpowers) than the competitive maneuvering of carriers and submarines,

Troubling questions still surround the debate over the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. A pivotal mystery is what caused Assistant Attorney General Richard McLaren to change his mind about taking the case to the Supreme Court for a test of the permissible scope of conglomerate mergers. He had eagerly sought such a test. Yet he chose to accept instead an arrangement permitting the glant conglomerate to hold on to the billion-dollar Hartford Fire

Two of the three factors which Mr. Mc-Laren said turned him around are manifestly unimpressive. The first was ITT's contention that requiring it to give up Hartford Fire Insurance would inflict grave damage on the national economy and on the balance of payments; the second was a telephone call from the Treasury Department to the effect that, though the Treasury had not tried to check TTT's data and would make no comment on the fundamental competitive issues involved, there was merit in III's general economic argument about the balance of payments.

This leaves as the crucial factor that changed Mr. McLaren's mind a report by an outside financial analyst, Richard J. Ramsden, a partner in an investment management concern. The report was commissioned by White House aide Peter N. Flanigan, a former investment banker, who is President Nixon's chief liaison with the business community.

The Ramsden Report proves to be nothing more than a financial analyst's opinion of the value of FTT and Hartford stock, separately and as a merged entity. The report concludes that divestiture of Hartford would have considerably reduced the price of ITT stock. Even if this analysis were correct. it is difficult to see why the predicted 16 percent decline in ITT's stock would have been a good reason for dropping the anti-trust suit against IIT. Are the anti-trust laws to be enforced only when there is no damage to a company's stock price?

In fact, if acquiring Hartford so enhanced TTT's stock, this merely suggests that the huge conglomerate has indeed been given additional market power. This would be a point for the prosecution, not for the de-

The Ramsden Report says cautiously that Hartford Fire Insurance is "obviously not a major direct factor in TTT's overall favorable balance-of-payments posture." It merely suggests that there might be some indirect negative effect on ITT as an earner of foreign exchange, if divestiture affected the corporation's ability to get credit on favor-

Congress-and the courts-must get to the bottom of what really turned Mr. McLaren and the Justice Department around. Far more is at stake than the confirmation of Richard Kleindienst as attorney general.

There is already a staggering list of matters that necessitate a full inquiry—the blatant shredding of documents in ITT's Washington files after disclosure of the first memo linking the company's financial gift to the Republican National Convention to settlement of anti-trust suits against it; ITT's subsequent claim that the memo was a hear (a claim cast in doubt by FBI analyses); the heavy—and possibly illegal—selling of ITT stock by corporate directors possessing inside knowledge of the anti-trust negotiations: ITT's maneuvers with an Italian bank and American mutual fund that apparently enabled the company to retain control of Hartford Fire Insurance Co. stock, of which the Internal Revenue Service had ordered it to divest itself in 1969; and the political deals—both in Washington and in Hartford, Conn.-that permitted ITT to pull off the $1.5-billion merger, the biggest in U.S. corporate history.

The ITT case casts a shadow over the processes—and the so-called partnership of big business and government in this country, a shadow that must be removed.

The Chiang Myth

The election of Chiang Kai-shek to a fifth China, no one could possibly take this presix-year term as president of the Nationalist government on Taiwan seeks to perpetuate a long-fading myth that has been effectively demolished by President Nixon's rapprochement with Peking.

The 84-year-old generalissimo is the living symbol of Nationalist pretentions to represent China. Editorials in the governmentcontrolled press in Taipei continue to express confidence that under his "wise and inspiring leadership" the government will fulfill the "national mission of recovery of the mainland" from the Communists who seized power in 1949. After the Shanghai communique that concluded the Nixon visit to

By prolonging Chiang's arbitrary rule, the mainlander-dominated National Assembly perilously postpones essential adjustments to the new realities in Asia. This action ignores the interests of the native Taiwanese, who make up 85 percent of the island's 15-million population but who hold only 3 percent of assembly seats. The Constitutional Crisis: 2 ago in Washington, D.C., Negroes could not sit down with white people at a drugstore lunch counter. In 17 states and the District of Columbia black children were legally barred from going to the same public schools as white children. In a third of the country blacks had to ride in the back of streetcars and could not go into a good hotel or restaurant.

In just two decades that pattern of segregated life has been broken in law and in fact. It has been one of the great social and moral achievements in America's history, perhaps the greatest. And it has been made possible by two principal factors: The place of law in the American ideal and presidential lead-

The South met court orders with evasion and delay and violence, but the courts stood firm, and in time they awoke this country's faith in law. The crucial political act was President Eisenhower's intervention against the mob in Little Rock. After that every Southern politician knew in his heart that neither the legal nor the political system could be moved from the course of desegregation.

It is that history, that achieve-ment of the last 20 years, that President Nixon's program against school busing now threatens. Of course the President has not said that he wants to return to a segregated society. But there are reasons, both practical and psychological, for believing that his program may stop the momentum of desecregation and even reverse it.

Moratorium

Nixon proposes a moratorium of up to 15 months on all "new busing orders by the federal courts," In a stillsegregated Southern district where half the children now go to school by bus-common situation—it may be quite impossible to devise any desegregation plan that does not involve substantial busing. In those cases the Nixon plan would effectively put a moratorium on the Constitution.

The permanent legislation he suggests would outlaw busing for desegregation purposes altogether in the first six grades of school, whatever the geographic situa-tion and whatever the history of racial barriers in an area. And school officials already under court orders would be entitled to have them "reopened and modified"-an open invitation to reverse the movement of the last 20 years.

Psychologically, the effect could be even greater. The impression Nixon sought to create in his television speech was that he could stop the courts and the Constitution-that he would stand in the school bus door, so to speak. Those who want a segregated America are not going to miss the message that at last they have a President who will

It is not surprising that George C. Wallace and the militant black separatists are both on Richard Nixon's side on the busing issue. They want an America of two nations.

White liberals will be hypocritical if they pretend that busing can solve the really difficult problem of education and race in America: The problem of the inner city. In Chicago and Washington and New York there are simply going to be schools that are largely black. The an-

the part of the white middle class to spend real money and effort on those schools even though their own children are

But recognition of that hard reality does not mean capitulation to the symbolism of segregation. Studies show that Americans, even as they fear busing of their children to distant schools, accept the idea of a racially integrated society more than they ever have. They do not want to go back to the two

The moratorium is the particularly disastrous symbol. The President might easily have suggested a pause in lower-court orders to let the Supreme Court consider the busing question. that course, indeed a Nixon supporter, Sen. William E. Brock 3d, R. Tenn. assumed in a television appearance the morning after the President's speech that he was just allowing the Supreme Court time to act. But the moratorium would prevent decisions by the Supreme Court as by other tudges

Profound Question

For Congress to restrict the jurisdiction of the federal courts in order to prevent a particular result obviously raises questions broader than schools or race, The leading precedent is a par-ticularly unhappy one: Action by the Radical Republicans after the Civil War to prevent the Supreme Court from deciding the constitutionality of military trials in the occupied South. Whether it would be constitutional for Congress to impose a busing moratorium on the courts would depend on the facts of a particular case. But the Nixon proposal raises a profound ques-

Hold, enough. I have been dismayed on several occasions recently while reading a presumably factual article only to find in an early paragraph that you are once again relying on a Jack Anderson column for your authority. Any scandalmonger in the course of a long career is likely to stumble onto a hard news itam as he seems to have done with the ITT case. But this fluke does not make him a respectable news source. If you are going to continue to honor his muck-raking tactics by quoting him you might as well buy his syndicated column.

Entomologist?

It has just been learned President Nixon is interested in entomology. He has asked the Congress to enact legislation to halt all new busing orders by federal courts.

In another message he said, "I am therefore calling today for a strong new effort to morshal science and technology in the work of strengthening our economy and improving the quality of our life." Whose life-the life of the WASP (White Anglo-Saxon Protestant)?

> That is the question that the lawyers of the United States especially should consider. The bar is often attacked as selfish, insufficiently public-minded. Now is the chance for it to show character—to lead the fight against hasty political interven-tion in the deliberate process of law and the courts.

It should be a fight that can be won. Other Presidents and other Congresses have attacked the Supreme Court, but the court, even when its decisions have been most unpopular, has usually prevailed. The public has somehow understood that in our turbulent country it is wiser to trust our ultimate libertles to those judges, however wrong they may be in this case or that, than to polivirtues of the Vice-President gain political influence." is that his remarks almost aiways prompt reflection, if not by him then by those who read them. One was struck, for instance, by his admonition the other day to Democratic contenders for their party's presidential nomination to refrain from dismissing Gov. George Wallace as a demagogue. Wallace's success in scoring 42 percent of the Democratic primary. vote in Florida made it clear, the Vice-President said, that he had hit a 'responsive chord in all sections of Florida." And then Mr. Agnew added in more general struck a chord with the people should not be referred to as a demagogue." But when you come to think about it, "demagogue" being pretty inescapably a pejorative word there does not seem to be much point in applying it to anyone who has not struck a chord with the people. Webster's New International Dictionary offers two definitions of the noun "demagogue." One, which it designates as "chiefly hist," is "a leader or orator popular with or identified with the people"-an accolade applicable in a democracy to almost any politician who has achieved any degree of success.

The second definition reads: "One skilled in arousing the prejudices and passions of the populace by rhetoric, sensational charges, specious arguments, catchwords, cajolery, etc., a political speaker or leader who seeks thus to make capital of social discontent and incite the populace, usually in the name of some popular cause, in order to gain political influence or office."

Less Flattering

This is less flattering and might reasonably be applied, one fancies, say, to a political speaker or leader who exploited the popular mistrust of big newspapers by denouncing them, far from the ambit of their circulation, as biased, mendacious or excessively powerful; or, in a more conemporaneous context, it might be applied to a political candidate who denounced the forced busing of poor, helpless, innocent, little children to schoolhouses far from their homes, their families and their leved ones.

The idea that a demagogue ceases to be a demagogue once his demagogy strikes a responsive chord with the people is an interesting one and could have been thought of, perhaps, only by the Vice-President. The theme is capable of endless variation. As an English philosopher observed long ago, the rebel is the patriot who falls, the patriot the rebel who prevails.

When you give the Vice-President's remarks the reflection they invite, you are almost compelled to acknowledge that, in a democracy, the people out of Or, to paraphrase and put it power who would, not unnatural- little differently, the demagazing ly, like to be in power, are for- is the leader who fails, the leader

Was it not Mr. Agnew, after all who swept Mr. Nixon into the White House nearly iour years ago, arousing the prejudices and passions of the popp lace by promising them a new Attorney General who would put an end to softness on erime and special privilege and re-establish a regime of law and order? And was it not an appeal to the anxieties of the public about something called a "missile gap" an anxiety fomented by theto ric, sensational charges, specially arguments, catchwords, calcient etc.—that contributed almost is years ago to the defeating a na. tional election of Vice-President Nixon, as he was then knows and to the election of John . Kennedy?

The answers to these rhetorical questions are, of course, at less to a considerable degree, in the eye of the answerer. But the inescapable fact is that very few incumbents have been custed from office by challengers who saw nothing essentially wrong with the status quo.

"Throw the ruscals out" has been a rallying cry of the ex-cumbents for as long as there had been a two-party system in America. And perhaps it we always be so, time without end For discontent is what make politics go round.

Not Salubrious

When the Democrats get through viewing each other with alarm in Illinois and Wisconsis and California and some other states, they will, at last, hold : convention in Florida and pick a candidate and begin to look in imperfections in the Republican administration. And it will be strange indeed if they find the state of the union altogether salubrious.

It is highly likely that below the end of summer some Demacratic leaders will be seeking to arouse the prejudices and passions of the populace by asserting that prices are too high, unemployment too widespread crime too rampant, giant corporation too powerful, the war in Indo-china too unsettled and the restions between politicians and industrialists too intimate. It may be that these assertions will be denied and supported by sensetional charges and by arguments more or less specious. It may be that the Vice-President will denounce them as demagogic. That is the inexorable nature of the democratic process. By winnowing reality from rhetoric, a selfgoverning people chooses in leadership.

It is an imperfect system but not an altogether bad one-or, at any rate, not as bad as any of the alternative systems hitherto preposed. The essence of it you might say, is distinguishing between demagogues and leadest man in the country, Lin Piac. "Just tell them," the official advised, "that you don't know." That sound advice covers a multitude of subjects in this strange land. China is the place for agnostics, and after a full month of traveling-in city and country, north and south-I find myself certain only about identifving areas of uncertainty. Of these the most important is the top leadership. China is now ruled by a tiny clique of old men. For example, the four people with political power who dealt with Americans during President Nixon's visit were Mao Tse-tung, 78; Premier Chou Enlai, 73: Marshal Yeh Chien-ying, who handles military affairs, 74; and Deputy Premier Li Hsien-

Purges of the recent past have opened acres of room around the top. Only two of the five-man standing committee of the Politburo (Mao and Chou) seem to be still in place, and there are vacancies galore in the Polit-buro, the Central Committee and the various ministries. Younger men are plainly getting ready to step into these posts. The Revolutionary Com-mittee that governs Shanghai, for example, includes three men of note billed by everybody here as serious bidders for power: Chang Chun-chiao, Yao Wen-yuan, and Wang Hung-wen, a former worker still in his thirties who now seems to run the town.

I have been told repeatedly by knowledgeable officials here in Peking that the way is now being prepared for renewal at the top. But nobody is certain that the passing of power can be accomplished smoothly, without the convulsions that have wracked every other state after a generation of leaders finally lets 20. The less so as there is a con-

That question is therpened by obscurity on China's greatest economic and social problem the problem of striking the right balance between the countryside and the cities. Just now the balance has a heavily rural bias, and that emphasis has enabled China to solve its elementary food problem.

But further progress in agriculture will require mechaniza-tion. That in turn will demand either much more investment in urban industry, or a large opening to the rest of the world for trade and credits to bring in mountains of fertilizer and armies of tractors and trucks.

Another cited article, published Feb. 14 in the New York Daily News with a headline, "Swiss OK Deal on Irving's Wife," ultimately caused effective cooperation between law-enforcement agencies to be subverted, the prosecutors' letter asserted.

The News article said that

Swiss and U.S. authorities had "made a secret deal to drop charges" against Mrs. Irving if Mr. Irving cooperated and if "someone goes to jail."

"By asserting as a fact that the Swiss had agreed to drop all charges relating to the serious offenses committed on Swiss soil, that story unfairly held the Swiss officials up to criticism and embarrassment in their own country, and made further cooperation extremely difficult," the letter said.

U.S. Admits Army Fault In Judgment

Tells Top Court Spying Was Carried Too Far

WASHINGTON, March 27 (UPI).—Conceding that the Army used "poor judgment," the gov-ernment asked the Supreme Court yesterday to reject a complaint of improper nulitary surreillance of civilian activities.

Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold told the nine justices several times that in his opinion the Army "went too far" in feeding into its computers information on individuals who engaged in anti-war picketing and the like, and in distributing the data to military installations around the world.

But Mr. Griswold said the 13 individuals and organizations who challenged the practice really had no standing to do so, that the Army had not violated the Constitution or any law, and, in any event, is no longer engaged in the conduct complained of. Attorney Frank Askin, of

Waldheim Picks American and Woman as Aides

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., March 27 (AP).—UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim today announced a reorganization of his cabinet, including the appointment of Rep. F. Bradford Morse, R., Mass., as an under-secretarygeneral and of the first woman in a top UN post.

Rep. Morse will, in effect, take the place of the late Ralph J. Bunche, although his functions will not be identical.

The appointment of Rep. Morse and a number of other top-ranking UN officials was announced days before the expiration of the terms of most of the second and third echelon members of the secretariat.

Mr. Waldheim did not name a representative of China in today's list, but said he hoped to do so shortly. He said he had offered Peking the post of under-secre-tary-general for political affairs and decolonization, but had not yet received a reply.

The secretary-general also an-nounced the appointment of Mrs. Helvi Sipila, one of Finland's top divorce lawyers to be Assistant Secretary-General for Social and Humanitarian Affairs. She will take up her new post this fall.

SALZBURG-

A New View of 'Tristan' by Karajan

By David Stevens

SALZBURG, Austria, March 27 (IHT) - After a detour to Beethoven last year, Herbert von Karajan's Easter Festival special is back on the Wagnerian main line with a new production of "Tristan und Isolde."

New in one sense, anyway, in that like his other ventures here it was prepared first as a recording, then put on stage in the New Pestspielhaus, using all the pessibilities of modern stage and lighting techniques. Not so new in another sense, for Karajan is a romantic and "Tristan" is a romantic opera to end them all, and the conductor-stage director has sought to find a modern visual equivalent for his aural

The result—as with the 1967-70 Ring" cycle that brought this festival into being—was some-what eclectic. The total abstraction of Wieland Wagner at Bayreuth and his dialectic between stage and music is not to be found here. Karajan is a musician first and stages with the music, yet he cannot and does not turn back the clock to 19thcentury stage realism. Where this "Tristan" succeeds, it is through a synthesis of modern technique and the work's romantic essence. Where it fails, it falls between two stools, The enormous width of the Salzburg stage is always a factor to be reckoned with-it has to be filled with something, yet it cannot be cluttered. Karajan and designer Günther Schneider-Siemssen opted for simplicity, with one basic set of sweeping elliptical lines serving for all three acts. Its basic unit was a long ramp sloping upward from left to right.

Focal Point

With huge sails, this made for a somewhat realistic ship deck in the first act. More abstractly, it had to serve for the garden of dramatic force in Tristan's "divine madness" that few tenors have matched in recent years.

Their voices did not always blend well, and Karajan also put some extraordinary demands on them-notably in the love duet, taken at such a low volume that the singers were hard pressed to sustain their tonal quality.

In the "Liebestod," Karajan achieved a striking effect by gradually bringing up the orchestral level to engulf Isolde's voice-just as the darkness visually engulfed her—while Der-nesch, apparently deliberately, yielded to the waves of sound rising from the pit. Yet the broadcast on Austrian radio last night gave a different impression, with a more even balance between voice and orchestra to the

It made one wonder whether the vagaries of live performance could ever permit Karajan to achieve what he has in mind. Perhaps, after all, that is only possible in some filmed realization with superior sound, and with

-Clupea harengue-the common herring-is a pelagic fish moving in immense schools in the North Atlantic border waters where the Gulf Stream rubs against the chillier currents from the Arctic Sea.

The herring feeds on minute crustaceans and other forms of animal plankton. Feeding on the herring are species like cod and tuna, assorted sea fowl, and Scandinavians.

There is a love/hate relationship between the Scandinavians and the herring. The Scandinavians love the herring, in almost every shape. The herring has every reason to hate the Scandi-

Before the beginning of recorded time, herring was a staple food in the European Far North. No historian has dared to state it openly but without Chipea harengus there might have been no Scandinaviens.

Herring may be just herring to most of the world but Swedes and Finns make a bone-hard distinction between sill, caught in the Atlantic, and strömming, netted in the brackish Baltic and landed at or north of the city of Kalmar. The strömming—Baltic herring in international culinary languageis smaller, matures earlier and has fewer vertebrae. Strömming is available during most of the year in Sweden and Finland and, from time to time, in exclusive ishmongeries in Copenhagen.

It is eaten fresh-caught, fried or grilled over embers. Those unfortunates with no access to Baltic herring may try Swedish-Finnish recipes with fresh anchovies. Smelts (éperlans), although belonging to the even nobler Salmonidae family, do as well. Fried smelts, like fried ström-

Latter-day Swedes, softened by 167 years of peace, tend to bone some dezen even stoop to strömmingsflundra -Baltic herring boned before it is fried, "Babyfood," commented an eminent strömming connois-

Strömming is great, but the Scandinavians really show their technical and chemical wizardry when they get their hands on gill an Atlantic herring. Unlike the strömming, sill can be found from Murmansk to the Maine coast, from Barents Sea to the Bay of Biscay. The origin of the sill cult antedates the canning plant, the ice box and the freezer. Sill is a gregarious animal and it is caught in immense quantities when caught at all.

An early chronicler, Swedish Catholic Bishop Olaus Magnus, exiled from Sweden after the Reformation and living in Rome in the mid-1500s, reports that the herring schools on the Swedish west coast sometimes reached densities sufficient to allow a man to walk dry-shod on the surface of the Western Sea. A halberd shaft stuck into the mess of fish would remain standing, like a farmer's fence

It didn't smell like perfume but the fish would keep for a season or two in a reasonably cool place. Reasonably cool places are easy to find in this end of the world. Salted herring, before consumption, was usually desalted and fried with onions in a creamy

One day, however, some gastronomic genius discovered that salted raw herring could be marinated or pickled, in vinegar or wine or almost any liquid, short of kerosene. With plenty of dillweed, mustard seed, parsley, pep-per, carrot alices, onions, you name it, and perhaps a touch of

Free-Market Gold Sale Sony Profits By U.S. Under Study

By Edwin L. Dale Jr.

WASHINGTON, March 27 ment among the leading indus-NYT).—The Treasury has contrial countries. However, officials (NYT) .- The Treasury has considered in recent months what point out that a number of other would be a dramatic move—sellmonetary "rules of the game" are ing some of the government's renow in suspension or out of date. maining $9.7 billion gold stock on above all the key rule of the old the free market. Secretary John B. Connally has monetary system that the United so far not decided to do so, though he is known to be attracted by the idea. Mr. Connally has the legal authority to sell the gold any time he wants.

The purpose of such sales, if made, would be twofold. Pressure on Free Market Price

First, it would tend to drive down the market price of gold and thus help to bring home the point that the free gold price is essentially meaningless for currency values, the foreign exchange markets and the world economy. As one high official put it, "The price of gold has no business being in the headlines."

Put another way, U.S. sales could quickly dampen "gold feve-" at times when a rush to buy gold might be contributing to nervousness on the foreign exchange markets. At the very least, the possibility of U.S. sales would introduce a note of great uncertainty into the gold market.

High officials point out that the gold market is normally very "thin" with only a small volume of trading. Thus small volumes offered for sale could have a big downward effect on the price. The second reason for such sales would be to demonstrate that the United States means what it says in its desire to phase gold out of the world monetary system. In effect, the sales would be a demonstration that the United States has little interest in maintaining a big gold stock for monetary purposes, especially now that the dollar is no longer convertible into gold.

A Breach of Agreement

Since March 1968, the world's treasuries and central banks have neither bought nor sold gold in the free market. The price has been gradually pushed up since that time to its current level of about $48 an ounce by a combination of steadily rising worldwide industrial demand and classic gold hoarding in some parts of the world, which tends to be augmented at times of monetary un-

Economic Analysis

If Cure Defines Illness, U.K. Is in Bad Way in productivity will permanently

By Michael Stern LONDÓN, March 27 (NYT). —If laymen can judge the seriousness of an illness by the size of the dose of medicine prescribed by the doctor, then the British people now know that their economy is in a very bad way.

The doctor who has been doing the prescribing is Anthony Barber, Chancellor of the Exchequer. The illness is stagnation. The medicine is tax

Last April, when the fever chart of unemployment showed 813,483 people out of work, Mr. Barber prescribed a tax cut of $1.4 billion. In July when the number rose to 829.602, he prescribed another cut of $610 million. Last week, with well over a million unemployed, he administered a massive cut of $3.14 billion, the biggest tax reduction ever made in Britain.

Unemployment is just one symptom of what is wrong with the economy. Another is infla-tion. As measured by the index of retail prices, it has been rising precipitously-by 8.1 percent last year-forcing up the cost of living and fueling wage

Another symptom is a flat index of industrial production. which showed no increase last year. Business investment fell by 8 percent.

These figures were a keen disappointment to the Con-servative government, which had hoped that the tax cuts would so stimulate demand that manufacturers would begin hiring laidoff workers, invest in new machinery and raise output, Consumer spending did, indeed, rise sharply last year, but it did not bring the benefits the government hoped for.

There are several explanations. One is that many Britons bought imported goods rather than domestically produced ones, with the result that if they stimulated any employment, it was over-

Another reason the economy has not been responding to the medicine is that industry has been undergoing a shakeout that may leave many workers permanently unemployed.

Productivity has been increasing, meaning that in many industries it takes fewer workers to turn out the same amount of Another explanation for the failure of employment to pick up is that labor unions have pushed wage costs so high in some industries that they have priced themselves out of the market. This is true, for example, in the coal industry, which could not survive if the government, which owns most of the mines, did not sell coal at high prices to the electric-power industry, which it its hopes on the fact that it has may be in store for 1972. a machine it believes to be superior to the competition's. Even if that is true, analysts say, there is more to selling computers than just building a faster machine.

Memorex claims that its new systems offer technological advantages to the user of small and medium-size systems. These include large data storage, comprehensive communications capability and speeds twice those of competing systems. Laurence L. Spitters, president, said that from early 1970 until late in 1972 Memorex will have spent $100 million on development and marketing.

said that even if the Memorex computer is faster or cheaper than the competition's, "I don't know what extent they are going to be able to place them in the market." The type of user for this machine "needs a great deal of support in terms of systems applications and software and Memorex has not been known for these capabilities." In addition, he noted, the potential customer usually likes to have some confidence that the company will be around to help out if it is ever needed. "Much larger and stronger companies than Memorex have encountered this problem." he said.

place a great many machines, Mr. Lukin said, the company's problems would not be over. The machines, as is usual for this type, probably would be leased. Memorex said rental would range frem $2,500 to $12,000 a month. Leasing, said Mr. Lukin, "would reduce the labor base needed by industry. Others say the high rate of unemployment is caused by cyclical factors and assert that just intensify the company's cash flow problem." The same concern was expressed by other analysts, who noted that Memorex lost $13.4 million in 1971. Part of the loss came from heavy asset writeoffs and

A number of analysts believe that the company may have some difficulty in arranging the necessary financing. Most believe that the company will turn to banks rather than go to the market. Banks already have a fairly large stake in the company and may be willing to advance more to protect their investment, said Alan Rosenfeld of Bache & Co.

Serious Problems Already Exist

Meanwhile, analysts noted that Memorex has serious problems in some of the fields it already is in. Mr. Rosenfeld noted that it already has been hurt by intense price cutting in the peripheral equipment market and the prospect is that the competition will intensify.

Mr. Lukin noted that one of the company's "hottest items," the 1270 communications controller. which now competes with an obsolete IBM product, will face new competition. IBM, he said, has just come out with a new model. the 3705, which leapfrogs the Memorex model.

U.S. Firms Cut Capital Outflows In Last Quarter

By Carole Shifnin

WASHINGTON, March 27 (WP) -The Commerce Department reported yesterday that the net corporate capital outflow was reduced to $401 million in the fourth quarter of 1971 after out-flows averaging over $1.3 billion ters of the year. Nevertheless, for 1971 as a whole, the outflows totaled a record $4.5 billion.

The department attributed the fourth-quarter improvement to a drop in direct investment cutflows. According to preliminary data, direct investment capital outflows totaled $358 million in the fourth quarter, after outflows of $1.4 billion in each of the three preceding quarters. However, the department noted that fourthquarter statistics in this area are subject sometimes to significant

The total 1971 net corporate capital outflow was a deterioration of $2.6 billion from the $1.8 billion in 1970. The department attributed the change mostly to decreased foreign borrowing by U.S. corporations. U.S. companies had borrowed about $2.89 billion abroad during 1970, but this dropped to about $1.22 billion last year.

The department said, "An area breakdown of net corporate capi'al flows shows several major shifts." For example, it said, net outflews to Western Europe in 1971 were about $1.4 billion, "an caverse shift" of $2.3 billion from

ABSTRACT ANNUAL REPORT YEAR 1971

- CAPITAL INCREASED TO BF 5,000 MILLION
- SHARE-SPLITTING OPERATION
- INCREASED DIVIDEND ON GREATER NUMBER OF SHARES

The Annual General Meeting of Société Générale de Belgique was held on March 21, 1972. The Governor, Monsieur Max Nokin, presided. The accounts for the year ended December 31, 1971, were duly approved.

The year 1971, though the economic background was less favourable and there were troubles on the monetary front, was marked for the Company by record dividend receipts This reflected the active business conditions most of the Group companies were enjoying through most of the previous

To this is added the income arising from the new liquid resources resulting from the successful increase in capital in April/May last year. The gross amount of this was B.Fr. 2,053

The net profit for the year was thus BFr. 815 million against BFr. 714 million in the previous year. The board is thus able to declare a net dividend of B.Fr. 140.— per "light-weight" part de réserve share (or BFr. 105.— for the light-weight part de réserve issued at the time of the increase in capital, the full rights attached to which date from April 1, 1971). This compares with the previous year's dividend of B.Fr. 675.— per "heavyweight" part de réserve, exchanged for five "lightweight" shares in last year's share-splitting operation.

The following table illustrates the recent growth:

Net profitB.Fr. m.	633	714	815
Dividends distributed	560	630	751
Net yield at market price	4.59%	4.84%	5.39%

The chief features of 1971 included the participation of a number of Group companies in building the nuclear power station at Doel. The engineering is the work of Traction et Electricité, the engineering office of which now has investment products under survey to a total value of over

Other events included the decision of Metallurgie Hoboken-Overpelt to build a new electrolytic zinc plant at Overpelt, with an initial annual capacity of 80,000 tons.

Société Générale de Banque has increased to a thousand the number of its branch premises in Belgium. New facilities provided for customers included the "S" cheque and the formation of the Rentinvest investment fund.

The merger of one of the Arbed production units with another belonging to Röchling'sche Eisen- und Stahlwerke G.m.b.H. led to the formation of the Röchling-Burbach company, which has a steel producing capacity of 3 million tons a year.

The Cockerill Company brought new rolling mills into opera-tion; Compagnie Maritime Beige commissioned up-to-date new vessels; La Brugeoise et Nivelles entered into an agreement with the Belgian Government for the reconstruction of the Belgian rolling stock industry; Carbochimique joined forces with S.A. ASED as a rationalisation measure in the nitrate industry, and the P.R.B. Company expanded still further, particularly in the production of polyurethane foam.

In other countries Genstar (Canada) extended its business in Western Canada, by securing control of three construction companies at Calgary and acquiring a majority shareholding in Ocean Cement, Vancouver.

Further particulars of these and other operations, and a general description of the activities of Société Générale de Beglique and the companies of its Group, will be found in the Annual Report for 1971, which is now available.

HILTON INTERNATIONAL IS A LOT OF LITTLE THINGS THAT ADD UP TO THE FINEST HOTELS IN THE FAR EAST. GUAM HILTON NEAR AGANA ON THE BAY. HONGKONG HILTON ON HONG KONG ISLAND. KUALA LUMPUR HILTON OPENING SUMMER, 1972.

March 28, 1972

Now, when you need an international bank in Munich, consider Morgan Guaranty

Morgan Guaranty has been doing business in Germany for many years, serving companies that have international banking needs, from our offices in Frankfurt and Düsseldorf. Now Morgan Guaranty has opened an office in Munich, at Von-der-Tann-Strasse 13. The officer in charge is Michael von Hoyningen-Huene, born in Berlin and educated at the University of Munich and in the U.S. at Columbia University. During more than a dozen years with Morgan, Mr. von Hoyningen-Huene has served the bank in New York, in Paris, and in Frankfurt.

Because Morgan Guaranty specialises in corporate banking, it concentrates its efforts in international financial and business centres around the world. Wherever they are located, our experienced and versatile officers keep in close touch with all of the bank's worldwide activities. And because we give our officers an unusual amount of autonomy, decisions don't get bogged down.

The bankers in our new Munich office have expertise in all manner of corporate financial services, including short- and medium-term financing, money-market investments, foreign exchange, and international money management systems. They have special talent and training for helping European companies invest in the U.S. Their primary objective: to help companies grow.

In Munich or elsewhere, whatever your corporate banking needs, consider Morgan Guaranty. You'll be in good company. Our experts are already helping 95 of the world's 100 largest corporations solve their financial problems.

Morgan Guaranty Trust Company, 23 Wall Street, New York, N.Y. 10015 • In Munich: Von-der-Tann-Strasse 13 (telephone 288445) • In Frankfurt: Bockenheimer Landstrasse 8 (telephone 717201) • In Düsseldorf: Berliner Allee 43 (telephone 10791) • Other Banking Offices: Paris, London, Brussels, Antwerp, Zurich, Milan and Rome (Banca Morgan Vonwiller), Tokyo, Nassau • Representative Offices: Madrid, Beirut, Sydney, Hong Kong, São Paulo, Caracas • Associated Financial Institutions in 31 countries • Member, FDIC.

False-carding possibilities for the defenders are not always easy to find in the heat of the However, West, at one table, took full advantage of his opportunity when the diagramed deal was played in a recent tour-

North hid the two minor suits, starting with clubs, and South bid one heart and jumped to game in hearts on the second round. Note that this sequence is slightly stronger than a firstround jump to four hearts, which would imply little or no strength outside the heart suit.

West naturally led the spade ace, eager to cash tricks in the unbid suit, and continued in response to his partner's signal. East won the second spade with the king and shifted to the dismond ten. South won with the king and faced the problem of drawing trumps, with only one more trick to spare.

South's situation is an almost impossible one-he expects to lose two trump tricks and might one table, South led the heart ace and collected West's nine and East's three. The declarer now saw that his only chance was to lead the queen in the hope that West had begun with jack-nine doubleton. He did so, and was rewarded. Notice that he did not consider playing low at the second trick, since if West held king-nine doubleton there was no way to avoid the loss of two tricks. In the replay, West shrewdly dropped the jack of hearts under the ace and South had a real problem. It seemed far more likely that West had begun with king-jack doubleton and had played normally, than that he had begun with jack-nine doubleton and had false-carded.

The declarer therefore fell into the trap and led a low trump, hoping that West would produce the king and East would not be able to roff the next diamond

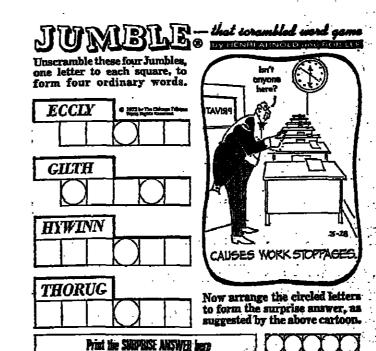

Unfortunately for South, West triumphantly produced his heart nine and added insult to injury by giving his partner a diamond ruff. The result was down two.

NOT TO DISTURB

By Muriel Spark. 117 pp. The Viking Press. $4.95.

Reviewed by Lawrence Graver

SINISTER metaphysical farce has always been one of Muriel Spark's specialties, but readers have frequently disagreed about the solidity of the relationship between the dark comedy and the ideas which often hover so tessingly around the Her latest novella, "Not to Disturb," again raises this issue in an extravagant

On its face, the story is pre-posterous. A group of servants in the Klopstock mansion near Geneva wait for the baron to commit suicide after killing his wife and their mutual lover, so they can sell scabrous memoirs to the press. Although the calamitous outcome is preordained, the events of the evening become increasingly bizarre and difficult to evaluate. Backstairs chatter mixed with ominous talk about contingency and God's dark design; and a casual attention to casseroles is spiced with sugges tions of ravenous, no holds-barred coupling, and an eagerness for profitable slaughter. Despite the threat of interlopers and the howls of a lumatic in the attic, the servants work to defend their predictive scenario.

The director of the performance is Lister, a contemplative butler whose incredible conversation is full of word-play, Jansenist innuendo and gruesome quotations from Jacobean plays. When the baron, his wife, and the libertine secretary finally begin their murderous quarrel in the library, the order is given: Not to Disturb. Waiting for the end, members of the household staff polish their memoirs and attend a fantastic marriage between the lunatic and a pregnant kitchenmaid which the madman tries to consummate on the spot. Two transvestites are dispatched by lightning, and when the police arrive, the Klopstocks and secretary are found settled, as expected, in pools of blood. Faced by microphones offered like hot dogs to hungry pilgrims," the servants rise gran-diloquently to their finest hour.

The license of Gothic has its liberties, and countless writers from Walpole to Barthelme have taken them. Some, like Ann Radcliffe or Peacock, used Gothic convention to satirize realism and provide pleasures beyond those enjoyed by the light of common day. Others, like the Brontes or Hawthorne, used the fantastic machinery to explore submerged human impulses and the secrets of a universe not to be revealed by reason. Mrs. Spark appears to have respect, her new novel is an agile send-up of different kinds of popular fiction: detective stories, the Jeeves novels, and realistic tales about the servant problem. Read with these parallels in mind, "Not to Disturb" offers fresh laughter and acerbic insight into conventional writing about the hypocrisies of master-servant ret-tionships. Occasionally, the pro-ody extends to other Gother novels. That randy cretin in the attic descends directly from Rochester's mad wife; but Bert =a 19th-century specter had sets fires and rips wedding velocity while Gustav—one of our orn leads on every female in sign But this kind of lurid enim tainment is only part of L. Spark's intention. She has at ways been a novelist who wish to tease readers into semito tease readers into sering thought, and once again in elegant, if rancid, comedy is late, with suggestions of parable. The question, however, is what say gestions, and how well are the actually embodied in the name tive. On one level, the stay seems to be about the falsity of modern social forms. Master modern social forms. Masin behave as if their actions at matter, while the real rulers—the servants—exploit private miss by public exposure, and the doing one's own thing" into predatory philosophy of life of another level, the story suggest a religious and artistic them. The universe in which men is so frantically is not to be in turbed. Life cannot be alter it can only be described by ambiguous powers of art. In respect, Lister may "be something of a novelist himself: a man wi broods about style, personell and narrative arrangement er who gives other people's pain form through which he express himself and from which he w

Reading along, however, one in never convinced that the that that dart so tantalizingly in an out of Mrs. Spark's story to sctually implicit in the action of the narrative itself, or that a the hugger-mugger in the vants' hall can support series reflections about predestination creativity and the manifold ag-ruptions of modern life. If hung-beings are deprayed, without for will, yet somehow forlorn creaters of grace, we need more resonant dramatic filustrations and a man commanding set of characters frighten us into belief. If Lister is something of a novelist light.
his antics are only intermittedly arresting, and few readers will be moved or illuminated by the puzzling terseness of his specula tions about art. Like several d Mrs. Spark's recent stories, "No to Disturb" has the cleverness t entertain and the intelligence provoke thought; but, finally, i philosophical mysteries look se piciously like pretenses, and the as the stimulating after-effect of legerdemain.

Cohen Wins Split Verdict In Paris Ring

By Bernard Kirsch PARIS, March 27 (IHT).—The week ended differently from ths way it started for Willie the Worm, who had to travel 5,000 miles and lose half a day to pick up his first loss as a boxer.

Willie Monroe, winner of his first 24 fights, 21 within the distance, lost a somewhat disputed split 10-round decision to mid-dleweight Nessim (Call me Max) Cohen tonight at the Palais des Sports in a fight close enough to merit a hometown decision. Max, born in Morocco, now lives in Last Tuesday night, Monroe had a relaxing time in a Houston arena, gaining a 10-round decision over light-heavyweight Lews Galvan. He began his travels the following day, and Thursday afternoon, after losing eight hours m his trip, Willie the Worm arrived in Paris.

Willie is only 23, and in finely muscular shape, and his manager, Yancey Durham, also the handler of heavyweight champion Joe Frazier, thought that the ringwise Cohen, now with a 29-7-7 won-lost-tied record, would give his boy a good test. That he did. Down for Eight

In the third round, after catching a series of Monroe jabs, Max tested the youngster's straight right and went down for an eight count. But Willie, destined for bigger and better nights, is still in-experienced and he threw a flurry of wild punches and Max escaped. By the tenth round, the fight xas close and Durham thought his boy lost in the final round. 'You can't be safe when you're .a another guy's hometown. 76ers Coach Quits PHILADELPHIA, March 27

(AP) —Jack Ramsay, coach of the Philadelphia 76ers, resigned yesterday immediately after his team lost its final National Basketball Association game to the Golden State Warriors, 116-115.

"It's for the betterment of the team and myself that I make this change at this time," Ramsay said after the game. "The situation here das not conducive to my continuing as the coach. This team did not reflect my philosophy, which is to play as hard as possible for as long as possible."

LOS ANGELES, March 27 (NYT).—The aftermath of the 34th National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament promises to be considerably less routine than the competition which led, inevitably, to another championship for the University of California, Los Angeles.

Florida State University's president, Dr. Stanley Marshall, is threatening to sue the National Association of Basketball Coaches because of statements he termed 'damaging" to his institution and its basketball coach, Hugh Dur-

North Stars Stop Fan, Rangers Bruins Clinch First in East

NEW YORK, March 27 (NYT). On a night in which the New York Rangers were denied first place for the 30th consecutive year, many Minnesota North Stars pummeled a fan who had cursed them and had leaped on one of the players after Minnesota defeated the New Yorkers, 5-0. lest night at Madison Square

The North Stars were on their way to the dressing room.

According to Cesare Maniago, a Minnesota goalie, the fan, who was able to get past the Garden's security force to within a few feet of the players, shouted obscenities after each period.

Gump Worsley: Tough Old Goalie

By Dave Anderson NEW YORK, March 27 (NYT).—Among the gods of twilight, George Blanda of the Oakland Raiders has been revered as the toughest of the old athletes. But he is a placekicker and a substitute quarterback. He wears a helmet with a protective face bar. And his season involves only 14 games. Not that George Blanda is to be scorned. Soon to be 44 years old, he is a snarling competitor. But the toughest of the old athletes just might be Lorne (Gump) Worsley, soon to be 43, a pudgy goaltender who has signed a new two-year contract with the Minnesota North Stars through the 1974 Stanley Cup playoffs.

"And a week after those play-offs end, I'll be 45," he says, his eyes twinkling. "I'll be eligible for my NHL pension." After nearly 25 years in the National Hockey League, he will have deserved it. In his bulky pads, he has the burden of a football team's entire de-fensive backfield. He is the only goaltender of stature to spurn a mask that would protect his face and psyche from the rockhard six-ounce puck as players swarm in on him with sticks in their hands and knives on their feet. In the two-goaltender system that prevails, his share of the 78-game season will about 35 games, perhaps another half dozen in the playoffs.

Kapp Files Suit Against NFL

(AP).-Joe Kapp, who quarterbacked the Minnesota Vikings to the 1969 Super Bowl, filed an anti-trust conspiracy suit today against the National Football League and its 26 teams. The suit in U.S. District Court said Kapp will ask damages in the millions of dollars but the amount has not yet been determined.

Under anti-trust law, any damage award determined by a court or jury is tripled.

The suit charged that Kapp, now 33, has been barred from playing professional football since his 1970 season with the New England Patriots because he refused to sign the NFL's standard sioner Pete Rozelle, breach-

Allison Drives Chevy to Victory In Atlanta 500

(NYT).-Bobby Allison won the Atlanta 500 yesterday in a similar stretch drive that carried him from third place to the checkered flag in the last five laps. He beat A.J. Foyt's Mercury by 16hundredths of a second, about five car lengths, Bobby Isaac finished third in a Dodge, a few yards behind Allison.

The Atlanta was Allison's first stock-car victory of the 1972 season. It also was the first time since 1963 that a Chevrolet had won a major stock-car event. By coincidence, Allison's 1972 Chevrolet Monte Carlo was prepared by Junior Johnson, the last previous driver to win with a Chevy.

Allison covered the 500 miles in 3 hours 53 minutes 37 seconds for an average speed of 128.214 miles an hour. He won $18.350 from purses and accessory awards totaling $110,200. Last season, Allison won $288,000.

"I have asked to speak to you tonight on a subject that is vital to everyone in this country. When I took office three and a half years ago, this country was on the road to inflation: an inflation that touched every household. every man, woman and child in this great land of ours. I vowed at the time to do something about it and I am happy to report to you tonight that my efforts have succeeded. I can now tell you that the price of baseball cards is down .8 percent, the cost of trolley car tracks has been reduced 9 percent, men's straw hats are selling at one third the price of ten years ago.

"The only area where we don't seem to have made any headway in our fight against rising prices is food. Now I know you are going to say, If the price of food goes up how can we ever hope to hold down inflation?'

"My fellow Americans, the answer to that question rests with each and every one of you out there. Ladies and gentlemen, we can lick the problem of the high cost of food if we make one more slight sacrifice. I am asking every person in the nation regardless of race, regardless of age, regardless of party alfiliation, to stop eating.

"If everyone gives up three meals a day as long as Phase II is in effect, I assure you that our battle against higher prices will be won before the November election. "Some of you may say, "How can we give up eating when it has become such an important part of our lives?' At first it won't be easy. If I may add a personal note. Pat said to me just before the broadcast, Isn't there any other way of lowering the cost of living besides giving up food?"

"And I replied, Pat, of course there are other ways. We could freeze farm prices, or put a ceiling on grocery distributors, or issue regulations barring rises in commodities. That would be the easy way, the political way, the eronomical way.

"But, as President of the United States. I must choose the hard way. Certainly there will be some temporary inconveniences when people have to give up eating. But they are nothing comparable to the gains that will show up on our economic indicators.

"My fellow Americans, when you go to bed hungry tonight, remember you are not going to bed hungry because there is no food to eat, but you are going to bed hungry because you believe, as I do, in a healthy, stanle economy, "I don't think I'm exaggerat-

Mary McCarthy on the Medina Trial

By William Tuohy

ROME.—Author Mary McCarthy's latest book had its genesis in a remark made to her last year by the famous Swedish economist and sociologist, Gunnar Myrdal,

'There seemed to be a national examination of conscience going on after the Lieut. Calley trial for the My Lai massacre and Gunnar asked me why I didn't write about the American reaction to the case," re-called Miss McCarthy during a visit here. "I said that I didn't like to write about general subjects, and preferred specifics.

"I had strong feelings about the Calley position: That is, because you might believe that Gen. Westmoreland was a war criminal did not mean that Lieut. Calley was innocent."

Miss McCarthy has been an outspoken foe of the U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war, which she has made plain in two previous books: "Vietnam," in 1967, and 'Hanoi," in 1968.

Specific

"I wanted to keep writing about Vietnam, and the trial of Capt. Ernest Medina was coming up at Fort McPherson in Atlanta. It was a specific case, So I went over to cover it for the New Yorker."

The result is a book called "Medina" to be published soon in the United States "Some of the editors didn't like the title," said Miss McCarthy, "they thought that readers would think that it was a travel book about an Arab city. "The experience in the Medina trial was terribly interesting, but almost hallucinating in the way most of the witnesses changed their testimony from previous "It was a nightmare trying to piece together what really happened that morning at My Lai. I was struck by the central mystery: How could Medina have spent four hours in that hamlet and not have been aware of the massacre that was going on around him? "In a way, the Medina case is more fascinating than Calley's, because Calley was bizarre. He didn't really fit in the Army. But Medina was an organization man: The Army is full of men like Medina.

"What the trial and acquittal of Medina showed me, at least, was not that there was an Army conspiracy to free him, but that you don't have to have a conspiracy in the United States any more, The Army's case was presented in such a way as to be impossible for the court not to

"And one reason the case against Medina blew up in the prosecution's face was the public reaction against the Calley verdict and President Nixon's statements Many of the witnesses against Medina believed they were finking, and they decided not to give the Army the time of day."

At 59, Miss McCarthy remains one of the first engagé writers of her time. Her brilliant career stretches back to the furious arguments of the left when she was editor of Partisan Review in the late 1930s. She retains her dramatic, energetic good looks, with strong, sculpted features set off by her once-jet black hair now turned gray and a still vivacious smile,

Not Valid

One impression she gained from the Medina trial was that the old liberal bugaboo of a U.S. Army run by a West Point clique was no longer valid.

"The only West Pointer involved in the My Lai incident was Maj. Gen. Samuel Koster, the division commander. The officers and the enlisted men in Company C were not very bright. Most of them had not the educational qualifications to get deferments; many were from the South whether white or black, and many were the jetsam of our society. "I thought, too, that the behavior of the liberal left in the aftermath of the Calley case was simply insane.

"The left reacted so ritualistically calling Calley a scapegoat. The definition of a scapegoat, after all, is one who is innocent, and Calley was not innocent.

"By joining in the public outery against the Calley conviction, the ritual political left in the United States lost the chance to prosecute and convict senior officers who bore the responsibility, including

"And that reaction may have lost us the chance really to get out of Vietnam."

An Occasion

As for her continuing interest in the Vietnam experience, Miss McCarthy says: "I thought the Medina trial offered me a way to say something fresh on Vietnam that a certain public might be interested in reading about.

"But the American public has strong resistant powers. People remember the Pentagon papers not for what they reveal-ed, but simply as a fight between the administration and the press. Sometimes you wonder whether it is all a vain effort, whether you should retire, or cease to communicate with the public. "It's an old-fashioned idea to speak out on certain occasions to readers who know you and ; ou hope will listen. This may be an outdated idea, bypassed by mass communications. Maybe there is no such thing as public opinion as a motive force. "Still, I think there is. The reaction to the Calley verdict proves that if only in a negative way. And Lyndon Johnson's abdication must prove something about the force of public opinion."

Miss McCarthy usually works for years on a novel and interrupts it to do nonfiction: "The Group." for instance, took 11 years to write, during which time she produced four other books, her latest novel, "Birds of America," took six years

"In the end," she says, "fiction is more satisfying—but it's much harder to do."

Miss McCarthy has been living in Paris for the past 10 years with her husband. James R. West. a U.S. diplomat assigned to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

The Wests spend their summers in the United States at their home in Maine, for as Mary McCarthy West puts it: "I feel that if I'm going to attack my country's foreign policy. I should at least have hase in America."

While Paris is not her favorite city. she finds the place gradually addictive. "After four years, our news vendor now actually says good morning. In Paris that is quite an accomplishment, and you don't give up such triumphs lightly."
